This is a conference and book project on the first 13 years of the Court of Final Appeal (CFA) held in honour of its first Chief Justice, Andrew Li, who will retire in August 2010. The conference will present various perspectives on final appeals in Hong Kong, examine the role of the CFA and its judges under the Basic Law, and analyze how the CFA has developed the law since 1997. The speakers in this conference are the main contributors to a book which will hopefully be published in early 2011. The speakers will present their draft chapters and revise their work in light of the discussions and comments received at the conference.
