Seminar

Criminal Justice in Singapore – Winds of Change?

Professor Michael Hor

*National University of Singapore
Visiting Professor, The University of Hong Kong*

Friday, 7 November 2008, 1:00 – 2:00 pm
Room 303, 3/F KK Leung Building, The University of Hong Kong

A number of judicial decisions in Singapore might lead the observer to think that the criminal justice system is moving toward a more “rights centered” thinking. It is early days yet, and the shifts have been small, perhaps erratic and confined to the judiciary. This seminar will look at some of these subtle but significant moves.

Michael Hor is a Professor at the National University of Singapore and a Visiting Professor at HKU. He studied law in Singapore (NUS, 1984), Oxford (BCL, 1990), and Chicago (LLM, 1998). He worked in the Singapore Legal Service administering insolvencies and other forms of justice (1984-1987) before joining the Faculty. He now delights in all things criminal, evidential and constitutional, and in whatever spare time he has he dabbles in law publishing, curriculum reform and high-rise gardening.
