

Constitutional Reform for Good Governance in the HKSAR

by Ming Sing and Lucy Cummings

Constitutional Reform for Good Governance in Hong Kong is an essential reference book for scholars, politicians, Government officials, and students interested in researching the enormous body of literature on good governance and constitutional reform in Hong Kong. The book studies potential models of political and constitutional reform for the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region (HKSAR). This book would add value to existing discussions by providing a scholarly analysis on international best practices in governance applicable to Hong Kong given its democratic aspirations and One Country, Two Systems restraints. Constitutional Reform for Good Governance is written by Ming Sing, Associate Professor of the Hong Kong University of Science & Technology, and Lucy Cummings, Honorary Assistant Professor of the University of Hong Kong.

Ming SING is an associate professor at the Division of Social Science, Hong Kong University of Science & Technology. He got his D.Phil from Oxford University, and has been a visiting Fulbright Scholar at the University of California, San Diego. He has specialized in comparative study of democracy and democratization as well as Hong Kong politics. He is the author or editor of three books, and has published his research in the Journal of Politics, Journal of Democracy, Democratization, Government and Opposition, Social Indicators Research, among others.

Lucy Cummings has her bachelor's degree in economics and foreign affairs from the University of Virginia and a master's degree in religious ethics from Yale University's Divinity School. She returned to Hong Kong in 1996 under the auspices of a Fulbright fellowship in order to complete her dissertation research and received her Ph.D. from the School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University in 2001. Her research interests lie at the intersection of ethics and contemporary affairs, which stem not only from her academic training, but from her work experience at various NGOs in the U.S., Taiwan, and Hong Kong.
